Windows of opportunity: draperies, shades & blinds

As the days get longer and the sun shines brighter, your eyes are naturally drawn to your windows. Did you know that blinds, drapes, shades, shutters – in fact everything in the window covering family – should be both good looking and a good performer? Here's what I mean:

As I write this newsletter, the sun is streaming in my window. It's hard to see my computer screen. I could close my blinds tightly and block out the light, but I would lose the view and feel like I'm in a cave. There is a solution... and it looks good too!

Installing the proper window covering also extends the life of valuable wood flooring, furniture, and artwork by protecting them from fading.

Do you have trouble sleeping because of the early morning sun? There's a beautiful solution: a blackout window covering (there are many styles) will help you sleep long after the birds wake up.

Being good looking is the other job of your window coverings. This is the fun part when you get to select a drapery style, fun fabric pattern and interesting drapery hardware. Let's be honest, if you're going to add something to your home, you might as well have it look great!

See page 2 of my newsletter for a great offering to get you started on some fabulous window coverings... then let the sun shine in!

Design Tip

Your home will look larger and have higher curb appeal when your window coverings all look the same from the outside.

That's right. Very few people consider how their home will look from the outside as they choose their inside window coverings. A walk around the block will convince you: Do you notice how a different colour, pattern or texture on each window creates a disjointed, haphazard appearance?

Windows all have different requirements (i.e. blackout drapes for the bedroom, side panels to finish off a room's décor), however I can help you satisfy all those inside needs while also creating a uniform look from the outside. Call me anytime!
